I've enjoyed Donald Miller's books in the past. In fact, Through Painted Deserts: Light, God, and Beauty on the Open Road is the third book that I've read of Miller's. In this case though, I found my thoughts on the book much more mixed than I did with either Blue Like Jazz or A Million Miles in a Thousand Years.

Through Painted Deserts is an autobiographical account of Miller driving with his friend Paul from Texas up to Oregon in a Volkswagen camper van. In many ways this book is a idealistic escape recounting an idealistic escape. To summarize, Don and Paul slowly make their way up to Portland, OR, sleeping in their van (mostly) the entire way.

Through Painted Deserts: Light, God, and Beauty on the Open Road was written after Blue Like Jazz (my review) but the events in the book took place mostly before Blue Like Jazz. Whoever thought it was a good idea to make a movie from Blue Like Jazz must be the same person who thought it be a good idea to have Don read his own audio books.
